

DOPE RUNNERS ARE SOUGHT IN MURDER OF RUTH RADLER

Young Trained Nurse Known To Have Associated With Group

SPURNED SUITOR ALSO

Detectives Find Girl Had Cloaked Movements In Secrecy Recently

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(INS)—Dope runners with whom she was known to have associated and a spurned suitor were among the persons sought today in connection with the mystery surrounding the murder of Mrs. Ruth Anna Radler, pretty 27-year old divorcee and trained nurse, who was found lying on a lonely road in Montgomery county near here early Tuesday.

She died a short time later of a wound inflicted by a bullet or knife.

Detectives in their probe for the girl's slayer found she had cloaked her movements in secrecy during the past few months and that she had used a string of assumed names. It was also discovered she had been arrested twice, once when picked up with armed gangsters, and the second time in a dope raid. The first time she gave her name as Barbara Price and the second time as Rose Dane. She was also known as Mrs. Rose Jordan.

Police also are seeking another woman believed to have been implicated in the case and the girl's former husband.

The search centered today, however, chiefly on the police's theory that the group of dope runners might have committed the murder to prevent the girl from talking.

The detectives likewise are seeking to verify their half-formed theory that a woman might have been present when the nurse's assailant inflicted the fatal wound. District Attorney Francis X. Renninger, of Norristown, is convinced that a woman figured in the case, possibly may even have committed the crime. He plans to again question Mrs. Olga Dean also known as Mrs. J. M. Martin, the dead woman's sister and widow of a Chicago orchestra leader. He will also quiz Mrs. Catherine Thompson, a friend, and Mrs. Thompson's son, who is said to be Mrs. Dean's fiancé.

"I am not entirely satisfied with Mrs. Dean's story," Renninger said. "We talked with her for several hours and left convinced she has not told us everything she knows about this case." The fact that the body had been carefully arranged on the abandoned road where it was found with the woman's neatly folded coat under the head has convinced Renninger that a woman aided in disposing of the body. Had it been a mere racketeer killing these niceties would have been discarded, he said.

HILLTOWN VOTERS APPROVE MERGER

Loan Issue of $110,000 Carried by Majority of 94 Votes

FIGHT WAS BITTER ONE

HILLTOWN, Sept. 11.—After the hottest election fight that has ever been staged in Hilltown township or any of its rural neighbors the Hilltown school consolidation issue was passed by a majority of ninety-four votes at the special poll held yesterday.

The issue was the authorization of a loan of $110,000 for use in building a consolidated school for the township, which will mean the abandoning of thirteen one-room school houses throughout the township and one inadequate high school building.

Two districts passed the issue without too-heated a conflict, but Blooming Glen was a center of turmoil throughout the day.

Trucks and automobiles were pressed into service by the leaders of both sides of the controversy, and continued to make trips to the outlying farms, bringing back "loads" of votes until the time the polls closed at 7 o'clock, standard time. Excitement ran high, and there was much speculation on the outcome of the issue, which has been under discussion for some time.

At Blooming Glen the movement for progress in education was carried by only twenty-three votes, 155 votes being in favor of the loan, and 132 voting against it. It was not definitely known until late in the evening exactly which way the election had gone in that district.

In all the districts practically the entire voting strength was out in force, and many people who had not voted for years on what were considered less drastic matters, came out with their opinions on the school merger.

Education found it comparatively clear sailing in the Hilltown and Fair Hill booths where the loan passed by thirty-six and thirty-five votes respectively.

The Hilltown vote was 101 in favor of the loan and 65 against it, while in Fair Hill 104 voted yes, and 69 registered no.

The principal argument used by the many who were violently opposed to the consolidation was that the farmers are not in any financial condition to have anything added to their tax burden. One of the worst agricultural seasons in years is pointed out as a result of the drought, and many feel unable to stand the added tax.

Adherents of educational progress hold that the tax increase will be so small as to be inconceivable, and that it is necessary for Hilltown township to take the path of progress.

Another real objection to the present schools was pointed out by J. H. Hoffman, Bucks county superintendent of schools. He warned the farmers that unless a new school is built it will be necessary for the township to expend possibly as much as $25,000 to renovate the "little red schoolhouses" and bring them up to state requirements.

Following the passing of the loan, the school board will now proceed to submit its plans, with the preliminary drawings of the architect, to the State authorities who must pass upon them before any further steps can be taken.

The architect, W. Marshall Hughes, of Reading, who has charge of the building of the new Lansdale high school building, believes that a twenty-four room structure will be sufficient for the needs of the township.

The change will affect nearly 600 children from the grades to high school age, who are now in the one-room schools, under seventeen teachers. All will be in the new school upon its completion. It is said that it will be ready for use by next September.

Discussions of Interest at Meeting of Chalfont Grange About Hot Lunches at Schools—Aviator Flying Over Doylestown is Attracted by Beauty of Place and Lands—Doylestown and Lansdale Rotary Clubs Have Inter-Club Meet and Participate in Golf Match.

Several discussions of interest to parents of school children were taken up at the meeting of the Chalfont Grange on Monday evening. The problem of hot lunches served in the schools was of particular interest to the members.

Mrs. Frank Moll stated from experience that such hot foods served in the school have proved beneficial to the children, who, in many instances, showed an increase in weight. The hot lunch project, Mrs. Moll stated, requires much of the teacher's time, but with the co-operation of the parents and the children it can be handled successfully.

Flying over Doylestown, the pilot of a large six-passenger Fokker plane was attracted with the lay-out of the town from the air and decided after circling this vicinity several times to make a landing at the Doylestown Flying Field.

"The town looked good from the air," said the pilot, Jack Frye, the lone occupant of the plane, who after his descent went to Fountain Inn, where he spent the night.

"In flying over towns in the western part of our country, one does not see as many trees or so much shrubbery in the makeup of a small town, as frequently as in the East," the pilot stated when interviewed. He went on to say that the Burpee Gardens on the south side and the Mercer estate on the northeast side of that place were especially attractive from the air.

Nearly fifty members of the Lansdale Rotary Club and their friends were guests of the Doylestown Rotary Club at an inter-club meeting. The trip was in return to a similar meeting held in Lansdale several weeks ago.

During the afternoon, an interesting golf match was played by two teams composed of Lansdale and Doylestown golfers. The county seat players easily defeated their Lansdale guests. Those who represented Lansdale were: Harry H. Schuit, T. Roberts, Bright, Dr. H. O. Williams, Herbert Metz, Dr. Herbert T. Moyer, Walter L. DuBois, Jacob L. Gaumer, Dr. Charles Lichtenwalner, E. K. Bean, E. L. Study, William E. Hager, Irvin H. Pool, E. J. Bennett, John T. Daub, W. W. Rees, Robert Yocum, Frank S. Hoshour, Warren Freed, Samuel Conner and E. P. Gotwals.

Following the golf match, dinner was served with Dr. George Hayman.

INTER-SHIP CONTEST BY SEA SCOUTS HERE

First Competition to Be Conducted Here on September 27th

PACKING CAMP GOODS

The first inter-ship competition conducted by the Sea Scouts of the Bucks County Boy Scout Council will be held at Bristol on Saturday afternoon, September 27th. The Seascout ships in the contest will be "The Robert Morris" of Morrisville, "The Yankee Clipper" of South Langhorne, and "The Elk" of Bristol.

At the close of the Seascout base last Sunday afternoon, the past week has seen the careful stowing away of most of the equipment used at Buccoo camps this summer, and at the Buccoo Seascout base. With the exception of the tents which are still damp all of the equipment has been stored for the 1931 season.

In addition to the arranging of the equipment the group working at camp will by the end of this week have completed the installation of two large water drainage basins with drain pipes, and the complete grading of the Clymer Boulevard. The drainage basins are being erected to catch the water before it flows too far down the sides of the road, and they make it possible to pass the water over to the other sides.

Scout Executive William F. Livermore, Jr., has been directing the work, assisted by Assistant Executive Robert X. Perry.

Among the men who have volunteered their time in order to complete projects before the winter sets in are Medical Director Bert Schaffer, Waterfront Director William Smith, Maintenance Director Mahlon Detweiler, Chief Wayne Stauffer, Transportation Orderly Charles Reimer, Show Director William Lentz, and Chairman of the Newportville Troop Committee, Max Köpf.

Kenneth and William Jackson have returned to Girard College, in Philadelphia, where they will resume their studies for the coming school term.

LATE NEWS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(INS)—Believed to have been "taken for a ride" by gangsters, Michael Kowel, 29-year old son of Gabriel Kowel, a Buckingham township, Bucks county, farmer, was found shot to death near the Penrose Ferry Bridge, South Philadelphia, early today.

Kowel was identified by auto license tags found upon the body, and two sisters who live nearby. The spot where the body was found has become known as the "bandits' graveyard," owing to so many bodies of those killed by gunmen being left there.

The young man, according to his father, had been "running around in bad company." The elder Kowel denied, however, that his son was a racketeer. Police believe the dead youth in some way incurred enmity of a group of gangsters. He had been living in Philadelphia for some weeks, but spent the week-ends at his father's farm.

The shot which ended Kowel's life was fired at close range, police said, as his heart was pierced, and death was instantaneous.

A total of 2,107 pupils has been reported as enrolled at the seven public school buildings of Bristol borough.

The enrollment is as given to date at each building is as follows:

Bath street, number of beginners 37, total enrollment 248; Jefferson avenue, number of beginners 42, total enrollment 353; Wood street, number of beginners 36, total enrollment 297; Washington street, number of beginners 35, total enrollment 139; Beaver street, number of beginners 17, total enrollment 59; Harriman building, number of beginners 76, total enrollment 354; junior high school, total enrollment 395; senior high school, total enrollment 262.

The elementary grades in the Harriman building are very much overcrowded, especially in the fifth and sixth grades, where there are more pupils than can be accommodated in the two rooms set apart for their use. It is with regret on the part of the school authorities that they inform the parents of these fifth and sixth grade pupils that it will be necessary to transfer some of them to the fifth and sixth grades in the Jefferson avenue school building, where adequate seating and instructional facilities can be provided. Those pupils who are being transferred now will be returned to the Harriman school just as soon as room becomes available to accommodate them.

Proposed school calendar for 1930-1931 is as follows:

September, 21 days, school opened Tuesday, September 2, at 9 a. m., for registration; October, 22 days, schools closed one day for the teachers to visit other districts, date to be determined; November, 18 days, Thanksgiving—schools close Wednesday, November 26th, at 2:45 p. m., and open Monday; December 1st, at 9 a. m.; December, 17 days, Christmas—schools close Tuesday, December 23, at 2:45 p. m., and the Christmas vacation continues until Monday, January 5th, 9 a. m.

Term includes 193 school days.

The schools will be closed each Wednesday afternoon beginning September 17th, and continuing for 16 weeks. These half-days are set apart in order to permit the teachers to attend classes and lectures on the latest methods used in teaching and classroom management. These courses in school methods are given the Bristol teachers instead of attending the county institute. At the completion of these courses, each teacher receives units of credit toward college degrees.

Four Men Hurt In Auto Crash; One May Die

ANDALUSIA, Sept. 11.—Four men were injured, one probably fatally, early last evening when a new sedan ran off the State Road at Andalusia, near the Philadelphia city line, and crashed into a tree. The victims, all Philadelphians, were taken to the Frankford Hospital by a passing automobile.

Harry Harms, 811 East Westmoreland street, received a fractured skull in the crash, and it was said his condition was critical. The driver of the car, Earl Betz, 355 East Cambria street, also was seriously injured, receiving a fracture of the jaw and of the left knee-cap. The other victims were James Martin, 3038 E Street, and James Houston, 3099 Gransbac street. Both suffered lacerations of the face and body.

According to a story told by a witness, whose name the Langhorne State Highway Police withheld, the driver of the new machine lost control of his vehicle at a turn in the road as he was attempting to pass another car going in the same direction.

BIGAMIST SAYS HE WAS TRICKED INTO WEDDING

Jas. F. Charlton, Jr., of Phila., Ready to Go Back With Wife No. 1

SHE IS WILLING, TOO

Other Court Cases Are Disposed of After Going To Trial

DOYLESTOWN, Sept. 11.—Claiming that he was tricked into marrying another girl without getting a divorce from his first wife whom he married eight years ago, James F. Charlton, Jr., of 1420 South 27th street, Philadelphia, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Hiram H. Keller to a charge of bigamy.

The defendant was the recipient of mercy at the hands of the Court after the first wife from whom he has been separated for seven years informed Judge Keller that she would "take him back again." Charlton told the Court that he now realizes that he made a grave mistake and would go back with his No. 1 wife and start living over again.

A fine of $200 was imposed on Charlton and a prison sentence of three months was suspended during which period the defendant will be placed on probation.

Charlton was arrested on the information of Mrs. Laura Molly, of 609 Wharton street, Philadelphia, mother of No. 2 wife, whose name was Marie Sylvester, twenty-three. Mrs. Molly claimed that Charlton came to her home and courted her daughter, Marie, posing as a divorced man. She said she brought the prosecution after Charlton had put her daughter out in the street.

No. 2 wife did not appear in Court, but Charlton denied the accusations of his No. 2 mother-in-law. He admitted marrying Marie Sylvester in Morrisville on January 6, this year, at the office of Justice of the Peace Kunsman after a marriage license had been obtained late at night from the home of the Clerk of Orphans' Court in Newtown. He admitted that he had never been divorced from Catherine, his lawful wife.

"I was tricked into marrying Marie Sylvester, and later I married her after certain reports got out," Charlton testified. "Then, I discovered that the reports were not true and I immediately took steps to have things rectified if possible. I am glad to go back with Catherine, I've had enough of this mess."

George Connors, twenty-four, of Philadelphia, was convicted yesterday by a jury on a charge of burglary, felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods. He was the "outsider" on the Perkiss jewelry store robbery. James Blair, of Philadelphia, pleaded guilty to the same charge two days ago. Both men will be sentenced later in the week.

Judge Keller yesterday fined Calvin Lester Reed, of Edgely, and Frederick "Fehar," 19, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., $25 and costs and suspended a prison sentence of two to four years in both cases, placing the defendants on probation for two years.

Both pleaded guilty to felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods. The home of Thomas Mehan, near Edgely, was entered last February when ten blankets were stolen.

Trial started late yesterday in the case of James V. Fitzgerald, of Durham township, charged with robbery, being armed with an offensive weapon, larceny and receiving stolen goods. He was arrested by State Police following a hold-up on the River Road near the Narrows Hotel on the morning of July 21 when Frank Jivitch, twenty-four, of Allentown, an ice cream truck driver was robbed of $60. Two other youths, Paul Wesbecker, of Easton, and Norman Leichter, of Upper Black Eddy, pleaded guilty to the same charge two weeks ago and were sentenced.

John Thornton, sixty, of Oxford Valley, was acquitted yesterday by a jury on a serious criminal charge brought by the parents of two small girls, one five and the other ten. The jury directed that Thornton pay the costs and Judge Boyer warned the defendant to "watch his conduct in the future."

Henry Roman and Edward Cimens, of Philadelphia, pleaded guilty yesterday before Judge Boyer to a charge of burglary, felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods. They were sentenced to one to two years in the county prison. They stole a truck from Peter Bono, of Bristol.

Judge Keller yesterday directed a jury to acquit Mary Gorski, of Penns Park, on a charge of cruelty to animals brought by the representative of the Bucks County Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. A Commonwealth witness, a Newtown veterinarian, testified that a horse found on the defendant's farm that the Commonwealth alleged was neglected was simply sick and had not been abused.

Samuel Lamb, of Coatesville, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kennedy, of Garden street.

THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 11, 1930

AUTUMN

The first suggestions of autumn are not so much seen as felt. They are vague and indistinct, yet real. The fading of summer into fall resembles the subtle changes that overtake one at middle life, in that it is slight, gentle and unobtrusive. There is a little lessening of vision, and the eyes are weary after extended reading. So comes the resort to spectacles, not of course that they are really needed, but as "an aid to reading, a preventive only." There is a slight slowing up of physical activities, a resolution not to overdo; a feeling that one has earned the right to slacken the pace and relax a little oftener. Yet there is still zest in living, and charm and color and melody continue to allure. Thus slowly, almost imperceptibly, but surely, comes the knowledge that one has reached high noon, and the shadows must of necessity lengthen toward the East.

It is in the month of September that summer fades into autumn. The tokens at first are not numerous, but they are there. Something in the air is alien to August, a certain crispness that is tonic. There is a slight haze on the horizon. The greenness of the earth and trees is subdued, and there are faint tints of brown appearing here and there. There is a shimmering and a shriveling in the corn fields, and the process of ripening is quickened daily. A few of the birds have already answered the call of the Southland, but many linger to gladden the eyes of the wayfarer and cheer his heart. Winter still seems a long way off, and it is good to know that between September days and flurry of snow and ice are the flaming splendors of October.

September is a month that has much to offer to those who are in love with life under the open sky. The days are cool, but not too cool for comfort. The rays of the sun are genial, but not unpleasantly warm. The early mornings are bracing, and the early evenings have in them a quality of dreamy ardor. The leaves are falling, but not in profusion. Summer fades slowly, almost as imperceptibly as the charm of a beautiful woman in her early forties whose eyes are still eloquent, and with healthful fervor undiminished. Such is September, standing midway between the purple maturity of midsummer, and the old gold and crimson of the crowning days of autumn.

The man at the bottom of most things is usually up a tree.

Men who catch on to things too quickly let go the same way.

The future usually becomes the past without anything happening.

Tragedy engulfed Jerry March's roommates, Francine, who made a flashy pick-up and found he was a thief and con man who went off with David, younger son of the owner of the department store where they worked, and was soon deserted. Jerry, a model with beauty and brains, shouldered their troubles as well as her own. She herself loved Tony Jardine, David's older brother but she resented his dishonorable approach. When he apologized and begged for another chance Jerry refused him because of his brother's treatment of her friend. After having helped Francine go back to her folks, she devoted herself to nursing the prostrated Connie. Unknown to her the other son of the owner made a reception for David and his bride-to-be was to be broadcast that night. While Jerry went for a ride once around the block with an old admirer, Constance listened in on the account of the reception. It was too much to bear. Jerry returned to find the radio on and her friend dying, with an empty bottle marked POISON by her side.

"Ah—some late guests are arriving—General and Mrs. Werner Higginson—Lord and Lady Batteray—and—driving up in the Hispano-utza—who? Thank you, Mr. Elliott Beck—with—And Miss Vivian Aldershot—Miss Aldershot is wearing a charming little House Soars creation—"

The doctor followed Jerry into the empty room, through which there buzzed the noises of the distant party and the voice of the announcer, shouting above them.

"There she is, doctor—"

Savagely, Jerry switched off the fatal radio. There was a slight comfort in consigning that voice to outer darkness. She rushed to pull down the wall bed. Carrying Constance in his arms, the doctor commanded, "Get some milk! Quick!"

As Jerry ran with it from the kitchenette, the doctor bent his ear to the stethoscope and listened—listened. Jerry did not dare to ask questions. He demanded some towels and hot water and jerked open his bag.

Some time later, when he has set the stomach pump back on the chair and Jerry was standing beside Constance, chafing her wrists, she dared to falter: "Doctor—you've got to save her! You've got to!"

Frowning, he glanced up at her. He had worked with a tense concentration. Drops of sweat stood on his brow. "Doing my best!" he said brusquely. "Can't perform miracles, you know!"

"Isn't there a chance?" Jerry gasped.

"I doubt it."

She let out a cry, quickly stifled by her hand lest Constance should hear it. She had had moments of consciousness when her eyes half-opened and she seemed to look at Jerry and struggle to speak and now, while the doctor tilted his hypodermic needle, she won the battle with her apathy and managed to murmur, "Jerry—"

"Connie, dear—"

"Connie," Jerry entreated her, swallowing her tears, "brace up, darling—just make up your mind that you can get well—"

"I don't want to," she whispered and closed her eyes again.

In Jerry's mind only one idea remained. Connie must live. She vowed to herself that they would defeat death yet—Connie's life would not be snuffed out so blindly, so pathetically before she had had more than the most unfair chance to live! Not if she, Jerry March, could help it! And she could help it—fiercely she told herself she could and would. She knew a way to rouse Connie from her lethargy—the only way, the last chance—

Ruthlessly tearing and turning the leaves of the telephone book, she found the number.

"Glencove 634. Yes, Central—hurry! hurry!"

The doctor was applying cotton and gauze to Connie's burned lips. A slight sigh escaped him, as at the uselessness of these measures.

Mad with impatience, Jerry still remembered to lower her voice. "Mr. Jardine, please—" She had forgotten all about the pre-nuptial reception. "But I must speak to him—I must," she insisted.

"It doesn't matter where he is—I've got to—"

"Hello, hello," she cried. "Oh!" They had hung up. Then Jerry's resolution was taken. "Doctor," she whispered and motioned to the bed—"how long?"

"It's hard to tell—there won't be any change for two hours at least—"

He was puzzled. "Why, of course where—"

"I'll be back as soon as I can. It's a chance—something that will help her!"

Before the startled man could object, she had gone. She never knew how she had persuaded the taxi-driver, dishevelled, ghastly, almost voiceless as she was to take her out the long way to Long Island. Perhaps she had understood—New York taxi-drivers become very understanding—that it was a matter of life or death. Perhaps she had muttered it to him between clenched teeth. The only other words she uttered on that drive—or rather the one word that she never tired of repeating was "Faster—Faster—Faster!"

At last—the long avenue to the house! At last—the port-cochere with hundreds of cars parked about it! The lights shone over the gardens as they had on the evening of the fashion-show oblivious to the fact that tragedy leaped out of a taxi in their midst, that tragedy in the guise of a breathless girl stalked among the guests in the garden.

Tony Jardine saw her, by turns beseeching and ordering the butler who, just within the door, would not permit her to enter.

"But I must," she was saying vehemently. "I must, I tell you!"

The incredulous Tony came between them.

"Jerry, what is it? Oh—I'm glad—"

She ignored his hand. "I've got to see your brother right away!"

"My brother?"

"Yes—David! It's very important! Please! It's nothing I can tell you about! I must see him!" Tears sprang to her eyes; she brushed them away with one hot hand.

After a moment, Tony said quietly: "Why, of course—whatever you say, Jerry. Will you wait right in here?"

She walked to and fro in a small anteroom, while Tony went off to fetch his brother.

The younger Jardine reappeared first, reluctant and very much on his guard. If it had not been for Tony, he would have evaded this summons, but Tony had taken the precaution to accompany him. As Jerry sprang forward, David retained enough self-control to close the door, shutting out his brother.

The first words the frenzied girl said were: "Connie needs you—she's dying!"

"What?"

Stunned, he gaped at her. Not a muscle of his face moved.

Jerry gripped the edge of the table to support herself and went on in a dry, dead voice: "You didn't think people did such things, did you?"

As he made no reply, she added, "Neither did I." She passed one hand across her forehead. "But she did it."

"What's the doctor say?" he stammered. "What's been done for her?"

"The doctor can't do anything more for her—but you can. And you've got to come with me right now!"

He took a step back. "I can't do it!" he cried. "I can't go tonight!"

"It's impossible!" And, throwing open the door, he stumbled full against Tony.

Further concealment was just as impossible. Tony yanked his brother back and shut the door again. "Now, what is this?" he demanded.

"A girl," explained David, mollening his trembling lips, "from the store—took poison—" As he saw the stony look in his brother's eyes, he leapt to his own defense. "I can't help it—it's not my fault!"

Jerry was beside herself with fury. "Of course, it's not your fault!" She included both the Jardines but it was Tony she addressed. "You'll agree with me, Mr. Jardine! It's entirely her fault. She wasn't modern enough!"

"Just imagine—" with a burst of hysterical laughter—"when a man told her he loved her and wanted to marry her—she actually believed it! Isn't that childish! She didn't know—as we do, Mr. Jardine—that no man is moral or decent!"

She saw him wince. His next words surprised her and, if she had not been so distraught, she would have repeated her language.

"At my room—in New York—" "I'll get my car," he said briefly. But David shouted, "I won't go! I won't face her! I can't!"

"You should have thought of that before!" his elder brother told him. "You're a first-rate talker! David burst out, wheeling on him. "After the things you taught me!"

"I take a good part of the blame," Tony said. "All I ask of you, David, is to take your share of it, too. Now—let's go!"

"I'll be hanged if I do!" He tried to wrench free. Tony white with anger, held one arm in vice-like grip. He seemed about to smash his fist into his brother's face. They confronted each other, glaring, breathing hoarsely, while Jerry prayed that the older brother's meares should have some effect. At David crumbled. He could not stand up against his brother. He allowed himself to be led from the room Jerry bringing up the rear.

Tony's car bore no comparison with a wheezy taxi. No need to exhort a driver to go "faster—faster—faster!" The high-powered roadster swallowed miles after miles of road and tirelessly, easily made ready for the next mile, consumed it and still sped on. It was gorged with miles. Within, the three kept a profound silence. Tony would not speak to David; Jerry could not trust herself to speak at all; the culprit cowered between them. Jerry found it in her heart almost to pity him. When they had finally reached the house and were racing up the steps, she forced herself to turn to him.

"You've got to make her believe you still love her," she impressed upon him. "You've got to!"

David nodded, voiceless.

POLLYANNA

The human knee is just a joint and not entertainment as some people think. Please bare this in mind.

A porter at a certain station had a very red nose, which caused no little amusement to travelers in passing trains.

The new station-master had not been long at the station before he asked, "Say porter, what made your nose so red?"

"Oh, pride, sir, pride," replied the porter. "It's simply blushing with pride because it doesn't poke itself into other people's business."

Practice doesn't make perfect if the practitioner has no talent for what he's practicing.

The supreme test of will power is shown by the ability to pass right by a power shovel busy at a new building operation.

"The woman of today," says Mrs. Christine Frederick, "is no longer a cook. She is a can opener." Well, of course, Mrs. Frederick ought to know. But every now and then we run across a woman who looks more like a pair of scissors than a can-opener, while the number of women who remind us of ice tongs is astonishing.

"About that daughter of yours—"
"You want to marry her?"

"Not if I can get into your business any other way, sir."

Ruthless Rhymes

Little Mary, sad to tell,
Threw the baby in a well;
Mother chided, "Now my daughter,
You have spoiled our drinking water."

Billy Bore (listening to talking machine record): "That's a good one. What is it?"

Dolly Smart: "Show Me the Way To Go Home." I hoped it would appeal to you."

Customer: "Didn't you miss this part of my face?"

Barber: "I believe not, sir why?"

Customer: "It is the only place that doesn't burn."

Now that most of the postcards bear printed sentiments, the village post-master hasn't much to do between trains.

Some people have to hustle to meet the final payment on their car before it loses its trade-in value.

In just two years

A State-Wide Success

TODAY thousands of "Standard" dealers and "Standard" service stations are supplying "Standard" Gasoline, ESSO and "Standard" Motor Oil to motorists all over Pennsylvania.

Each month hundreds of new dealers are being added... new service stations, featuring service as only "Standard" gives it, are being built.

And each day Pennsylvania motorists by the thousands are discovering why "Standard" products are favorites by more than two to one in neighboring states.

All this in two short years. There is only one answer—the quality built into "Standard" products through over half a century of refining experience.

KONJOLA COMES TO RESCUE OF THIS MAN, 70

Overjoyed at Results New and Different Medicine Gave. "Shall Always Praise It," He Says.

MR. ANTHONY CICCO

"At my age, 70 years, I had no idea that any medicine would help me, but Konjola did. I suffered for several years with stomach trouble and constipation," said Mr. Anthony Cicco, 35 South Main street, Wilkes-Barre. "Other medicines and treatments tried had proved worthless. Food failed to digest and did me little good. I was rapidly losing weight and strength, and my nights were restless. "The many sincere endorsements of Konjola attracted my attention and I decided to try it. How Konjola helped me! Indigestion soon vanished, leaving me with a healthy appetite. Constipation is a thing of the past. I have strength and pep, and sleep well at night. I have told more than fifty friends about Konjola and I shall always praise it."

Konjola, a compound of 32 valuable medicinal ingredients, works with the sufferer's food, eliminating poisons and restoring normal activity to the ailing organs. From six to eight bottles are recommended as a fair treatment.

Konjola is sold in Bristol at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section. (Adv.)

FORTY PLAYERS ANSWER B. H. S. FOOTBALL CALL

Bristol High School is looking forward to another successful season in football.

Last week when Coach Townsend issued the first call for practice forty husky boys reported and each is determined to make the squad. Coach Townsend is being aided by Thomas Uitz, of the University of Maryland, and Paul Brown, of Stetson University, Florida.

Although hit rather hard by graduation, Bristol will again put on a fast eleven on the gridiron. Most of the line of last season will be missed but the punch in the backfield will be there.

Of the linemen back for this season's football are: Joe Aka, varsity center; Marvin Collins, tackle, and "Bud" Tulio, end. John Dougherty, Bob Wright, James Esposito, and Tom Barrett are a few of the second-stringers of last year trying for a varsity line berth.

Nine backfield men reported to the Bristol High mentors during the first week. Pieo, last year's quarterback; Lafferty, fullback; Gaffney, Britton, Cole, Bornice, all halfbacks, are almost certain to be in this year's team.

Tentalucci, Swan and Tosti, three newcomers are trying hard for a back position and it would not be a surprise if the opening game found one of these youths in the backfield.

The Cardinal and Gray is faced with a schedule of eleven games as arranged by Student Manager Arthur Rago. One of the noticeable facts is that Temple High is not on the schedule and Bristol's traditional rival, Morrisville High, is booked to be here on Thanksgiving Day.

Two new teams are on the locals' list for this season's playing. Sellersville-Perkasie, a combined high school is here on November 8, while Bensalem High is booked for November 21.

The opening game of the season with Hatboro High School on September 19 is pending although the manager expects to have arrangements completed by the end of this week.

The schedule is as follows:

Date	Team	Place
Sept. 19	Hatboro	*home
Sept. 26	Jenkintown	away
Oct. 3	Newtown	home
Oct. 10	Langhorne	home

6 66

Nov. 8	Sellersville	home
Nov. 14	Springfield	away
Nov. 21	Bensalem	(*)

THERE's always some favored one with a charm that's all her own. . . . And everywhere in the modern scene you'll see happy smokers breaking out fresh, fragrant packs of Camels . . . a natural choice too!

For the mildness of Camels is a charm that's all its own . . . a natural mildness that's a quality of choicest tobaccos. Don't confuse this fresh, fragrant mildness with the flatness or insipidness of "over-treated" tobacco. There's a delightful natural fragrance to Camels, too, a "bouquet" as distinctive as the fragrance of oriental flowers.

Here's to the delightful things of life! Have a Camel!
